

Sannenzaka

This sloped path leading to Kiyomizu temple was originally paved with stones in about 808 AD and may be the most trod-upon street in Kyoto. It is lined with old wooden houses running restaurants and shops selling pottery, artworks and other traditional goods. You may come across young women dressed in kimono and feel as though you had traveled back in time to the days of 300 years ago.

